

A Thousand Sheep, art project at River Bourne Community Farm

Laurence Dubé-Rushby, a french artist based in Salisbury , is starting a new project at the River Bourne Community Farm of Laverstock, Salisbury, where she will be based for a period of one year from April 2011.

Laurence will be using the wool from the sheep of the farm as her main material to create a contemporary art installation.

A project for Your school/group!

When your school/group visits the farm, the children will see the process and begin to engage with the piece in the making.

School workshops will be based on using and processing sheep fleece as a material for art in many different ways as well as using other natural resources

If you wish to book a workshop or need more information,
